ROGER W. BABSON
BABSON PARK, FLORIDA

To the Graduates of 1947:

Many of you are asking yourselves: "What line of work shall I enter?" Naturally I cannot answer this en masse, since all of you have different capabilities and opportunities. The main thing is not to attempt NOW to go into business for yourself. Insist, however, on getting a job in some line of work in which you will be happy. Real efficiency and true happiness are synonymous. If there is a business in which your family is interested, you are fortunate, because fathers, brothers and friends can be of great help to you.

Be willing to start work at $40.00 a week, if necessary; forget yourself and give your best to helping your employer in every way possible. This does not mean to tell him how to run his business, but it does mean that you should be the first to be at the plant or office and the last to leave every night—giving him more than he gives you. Most business men are hungry for good executives who know their stuff and have initiative (self winders) energy, courage and loyalty. If you will develop these qualities you will be pushed ahead.

Now, a word on where to locate: The best opportunities are in the U. S. cities of 10,000 to 30,000 people situated in the Central West. Avoid large cities; they are on the decline. During your business life time decentralization will be the watch word. I do not advise farming as a business--except in some very special circumstances—but all families should aim to own--as insurance--a small farm which they can visit once a year. Hence let me offer some good investment advice:

- (1) If you now live in a farming community, continue to live there and urge your children to settle there and bring up a good family. Support its churches, schools and newspapers. Do not neglect the great opportunities which God has given you.
- (2) If you do now live in a farming community, then during the next depression when good farms are selling at 50 cents on the dollar, buy one which is properly located. Rent it on fair terms to some family of good character which loves farming. Help that family to make a living and be happy thereon. If you are obliged to put back into improvements most of what you get in rent, be satisfied, so long as there is one room in the house reserved for your use in an emergency. (Remember there may be a World War III when our large U. S. cities can be bombed.) Once each year visit this family. It will do both you and them good. Investments can yield returns more desirable than money.

I am, Wishing you all the success you deserve (I can do no more),

Your friend,

Roger W. Babson

DEVELOPING A COMMUNITY FOR THE IMPROVEMENT OF BUSINESS CONDITIONS

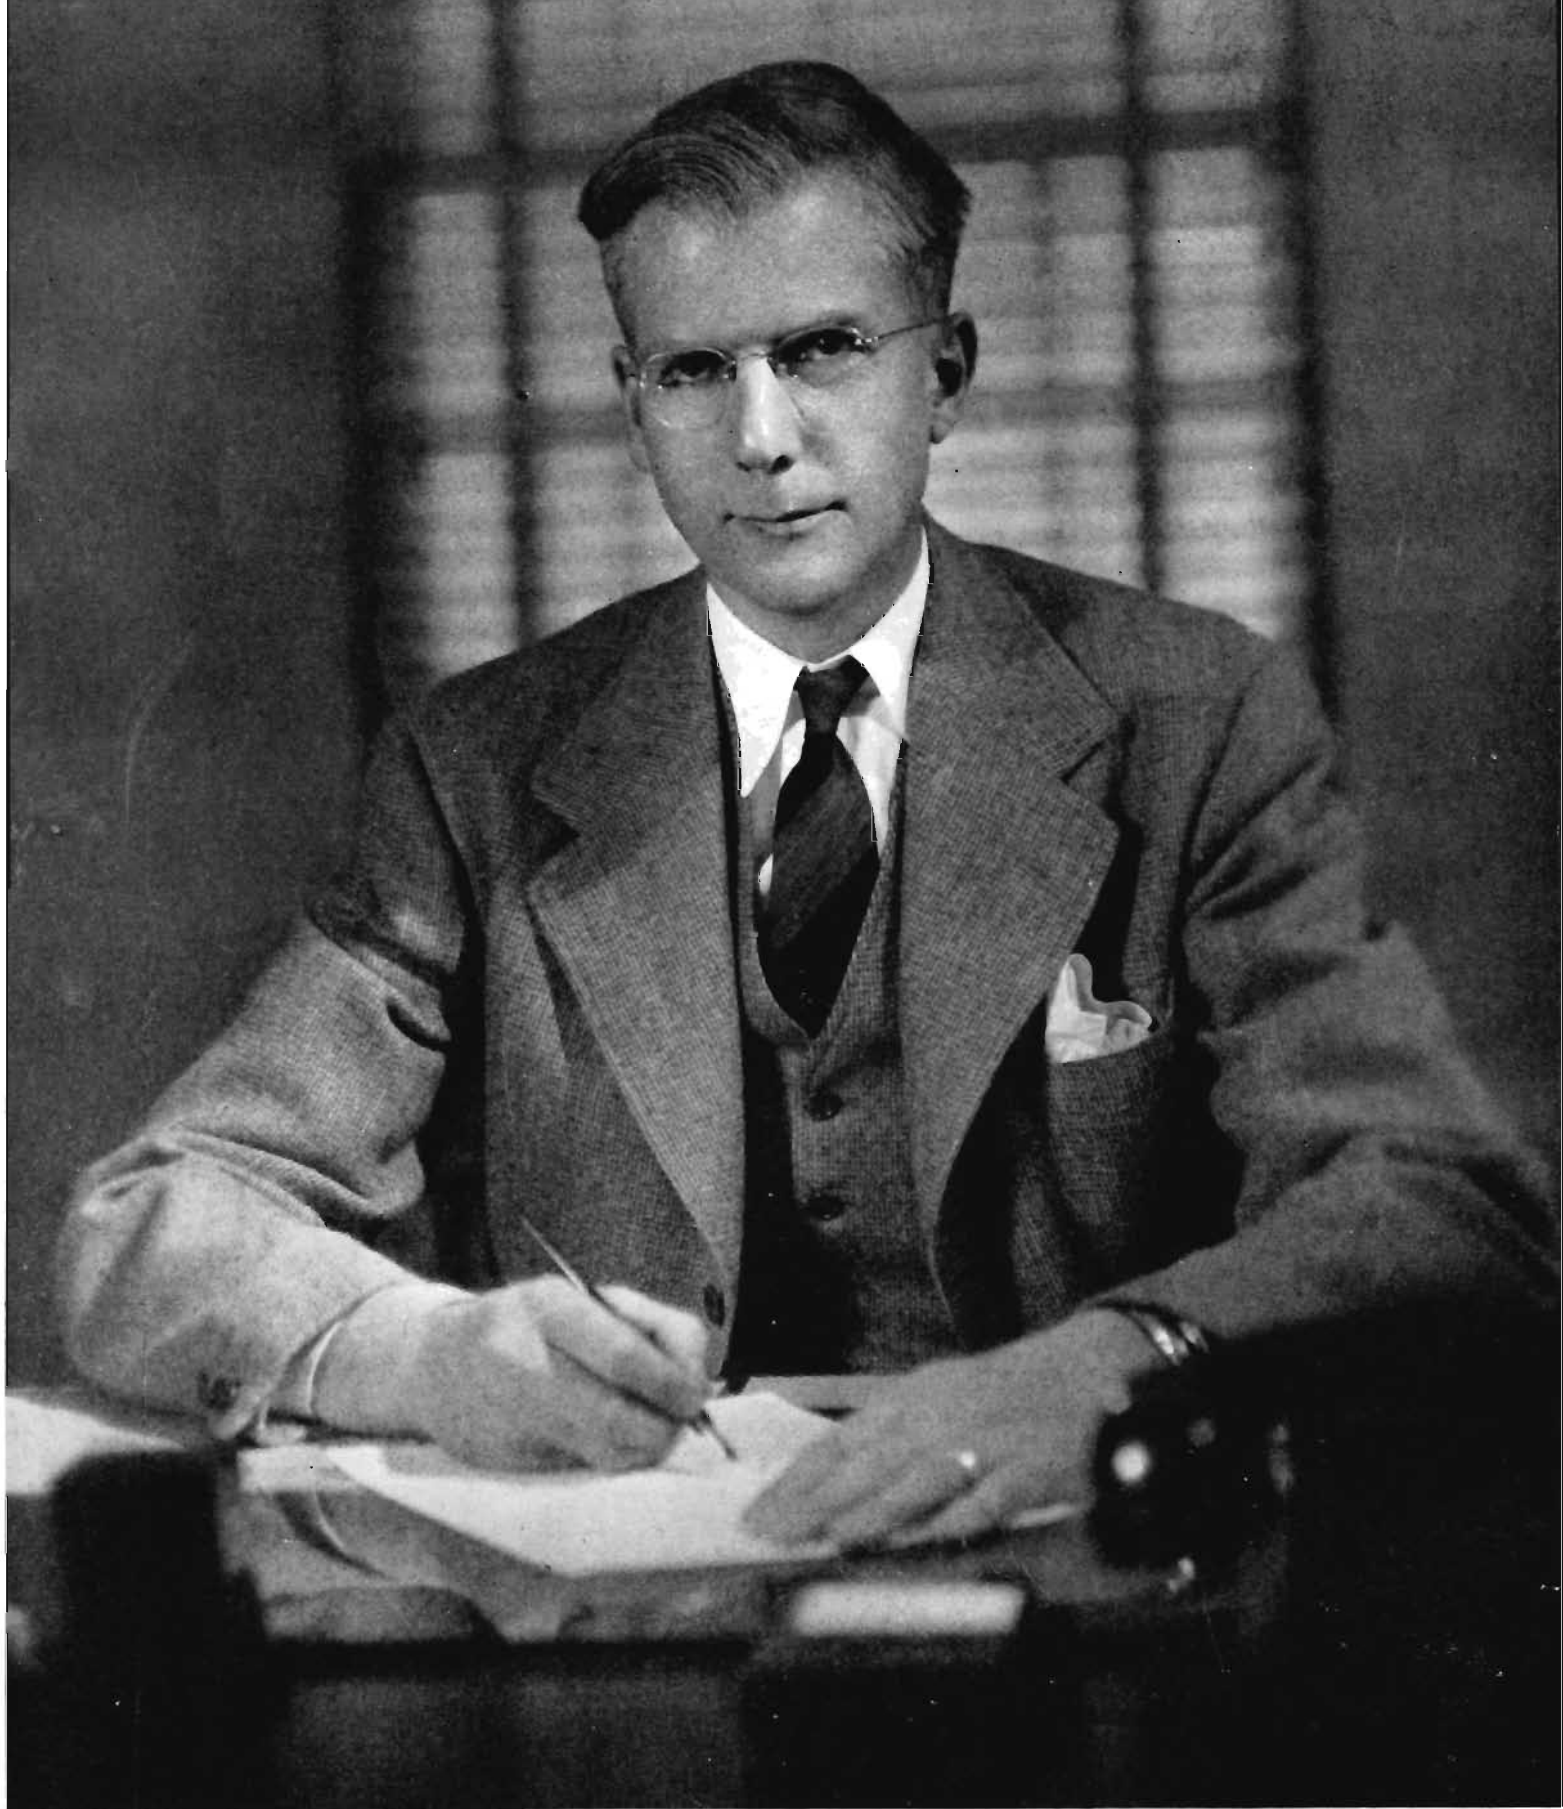

To PRESIDENT HINCKLEY

To President Edward B. Hinckley we respectfully dedicate the 1947 BABSONIAN. As we come to know him more, we see his plan for Babson Institute develop: a plan of many ideals that leads to the advancement of the Institute.

From a great fund of scientific and liberal knowledge, combined with practical administration, Dr. Hinckley has made great strides since June, 1946, toward the goal of the Institute — that of successful training in Business Administration. With him as our helmsman, the set of the sail on the Babson ship is assured.

As he has pledged himself to the betterment of Babson Institute, we pledge to him our whole-hearted support.

To: The Graduating Class of 1947

I am glad of the opportunity to greet the graduating class of the Babson Institute of Business Administration.

In this, the second year after the most destructive war in history, one must be extremely careful in addressing young people who are about to grapple with the problems of business or finance.

You have, I know, had thorough preparation in the Babson Institute. You have profited by the records and teachings of experience. Now, you are to participate in the making of experience. Old graphs and charts, you will find, are faltering guides in a still largely disorganized world.

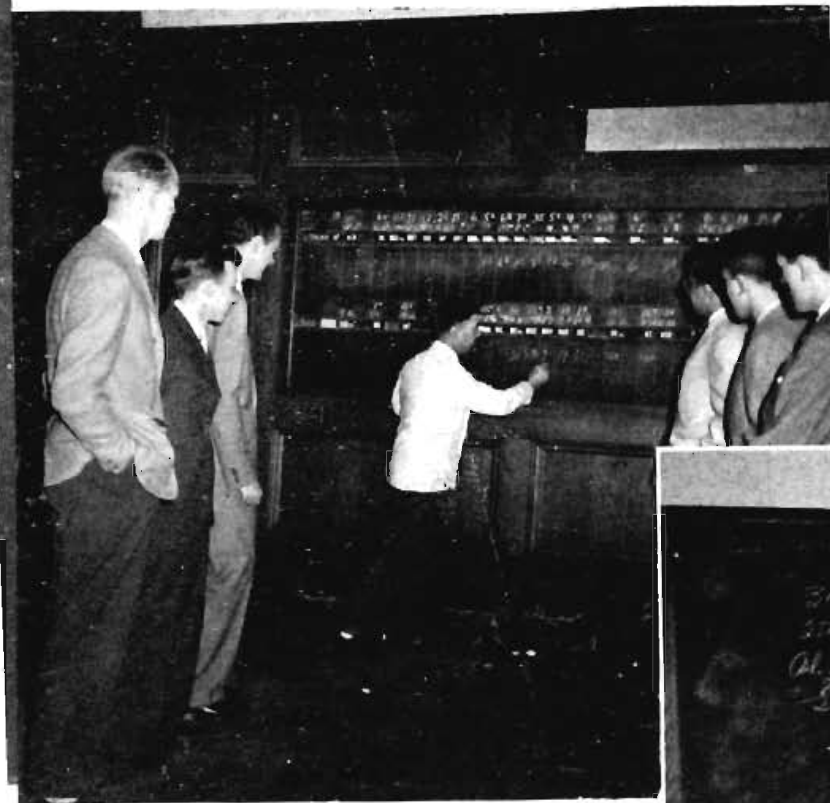

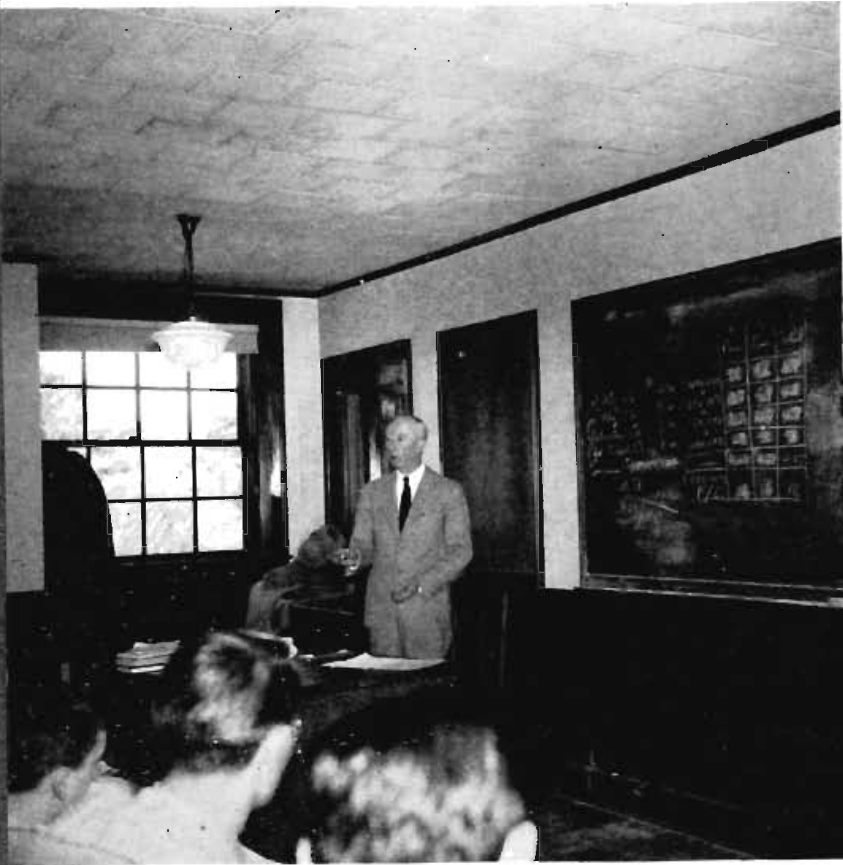

The challenge that is yours to accept calls for courage, ingenuity and hard work. It beckons to those whose confidence is cemented in sound economics. Attainment of your degrees indicates a strong economic foothold...a solid beginning. No young person could expect anything better or less.

Finance

It is obvious that the major functions of business are closely related and the common denominator of all business activity is finance.

The objective of the Business Finance courses is to provide a knowledge of those institutions, instruments and principles of finance which will enable the individual to deal intelligently with the main financial problems arising in the management of a business. Such study has a pervasive value for all students regardless of the particular area of specialization and interest to which they may later devote their time. The Personal Estates and Investment courses have dual objectives: first, to help the student learn to manage his personal financial affairs -- the intelligent utilization of his income in building an estate and in attaining the maximum stability and satisfaction in his personal and family life; second, to give the student a sound knowledge of investment principles and practices in the business world. Accounting is studied not as an end in itself, but as an aid to successful management. The student receives not only a thorough grounding in the theory of accounting, but also acquires a proficiency in preparing and interpreting financial statements. The methods of accumulating and using figures for analysis, appraisal and control of a given enterprise are studied in Statistics.

Those who have decided upon finance as a career may elect more specialized courses in Advanced Financial Problems, Security Analysis and allied subjects in this field.

TO THE GRADUATING CLASS
of the BABSON INSTITUTE,

When a young man has graduated from a worthwhile course of study in anything he can congratulate himself on a job well done. When it is from an institution with the record of excellent work that has characterized the BABSON INSTITUTE OF BUSINESS ADMINISTRATION, that is a reason for special approval.

Business and industry need more men with this sort of training. My generation learned its principles of business administration by rule of thumb and too much of the time it failed to have a wide enough understanding of the many factors which influence production and distribution. The wide variations in employment may have come, at least in some part, from the lack of understanding of economic principles by business men.

The field of production, as well as distribution, will provide many openings for well trained men. The objective of more goods for more people at lower costs was never a more vital one than it is today, and I would hope that the Graduating Class will produce a group of men who will make a large contribution to this great objective.

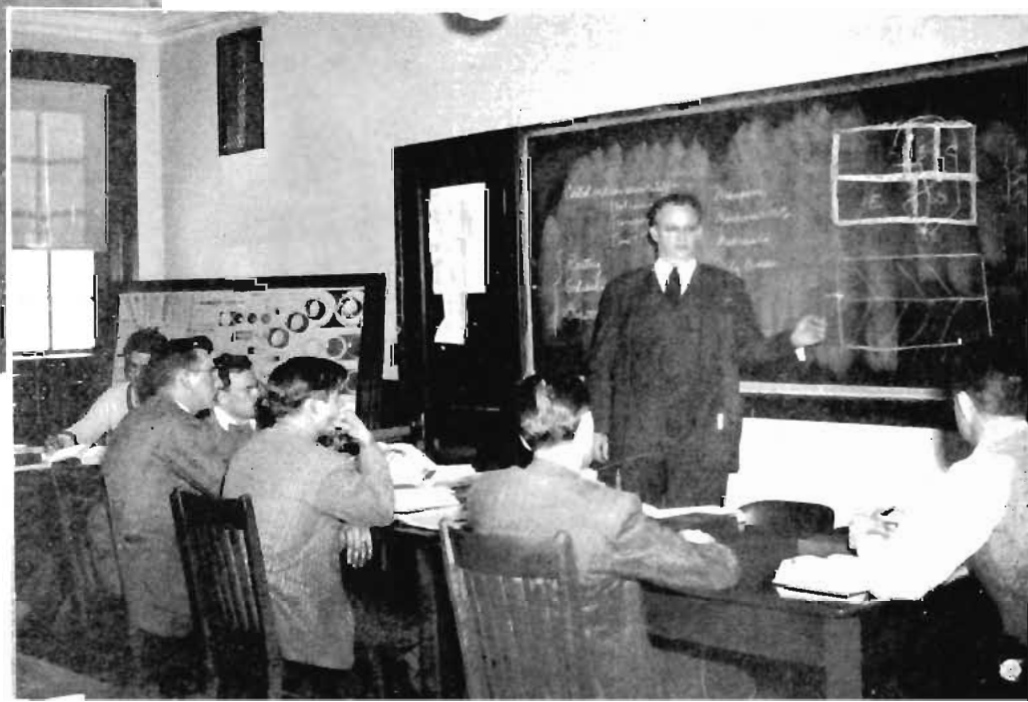

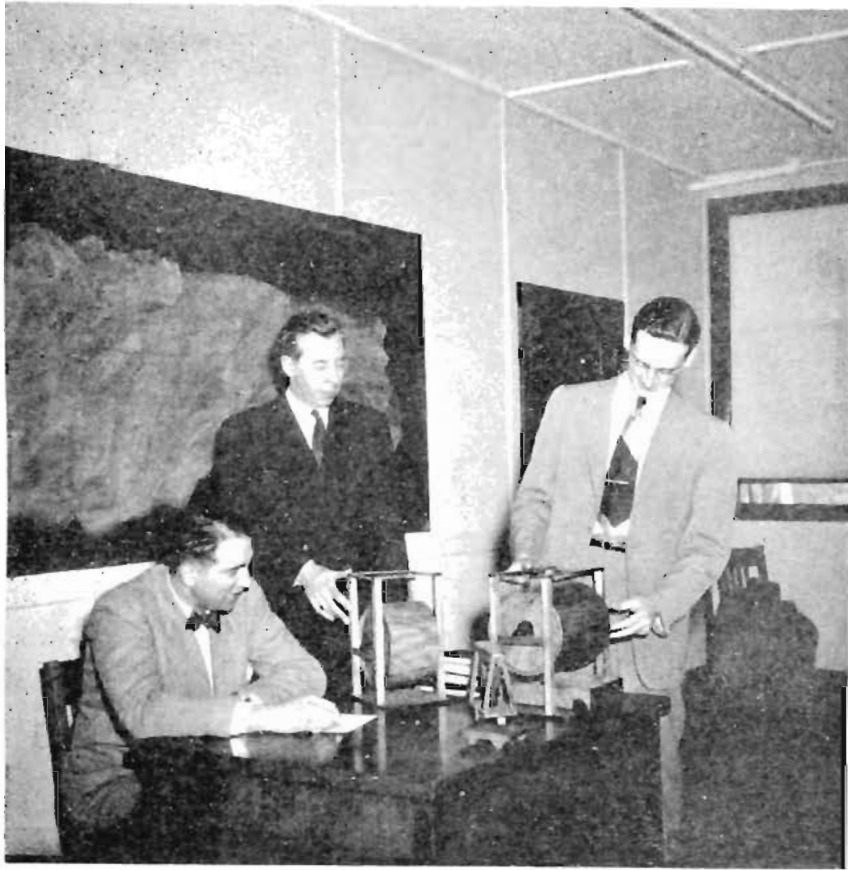

Sincerely yours,

William L. Batt

Production

"Better products and services at lower unit costs," is the slogan of today's competitive system. Industry must constantly analyze the elements of men, machines and materials with maximum production at minimum cost as its goal. The attainment of this goal is predicated on our ability to realize the fundamental objectives of efficient organization, well deliberated policy, sound planning, and effective control.

The Production course at Babson is designed to show how these ends may be attained. The study of Top Management Organization and Control demonstrates the principles required to achieve a coordinated and harmonious operating organization. A poor plant with a good organization is to be preferred over a good plant with a poor organization. In Industrial Management the emphasis is placed upon planning and expense control. Many businesses fail because of the many small hidden losses that sap vitality and leave them vulnerable at critical moments. The methods of work simplification, with resulting cost reduction, are learned in Time and Motion Study. Industry Analysis furnishes the student with a comprehensive knowledge of the particular industry in which his interests lie. He becomes familiar with the historical development, manufacturing methods, market characteristics and yardsticks used to measure performance. Beyond this overall study, those seeking more intensive coverage of this phase of business may continue with the analysis of cases pertaining to Supervision and Training, Labor Relations, and related subjects in the field of Production.

GENERAL FOODS CORPORATION
POSTUM BUILDING, 250 PARK AVENUE
NEW YORK 17, N. Y.

CLARENCE FRANCIS
PRESIDENT

To the Graduating Class
of the Babson Institute:

Please accept my warmest congratulations on your successful preparation for the world of industry. Your training will add materially to the great contribution you will make to human betterment.

People today can enter business with a new awareness of their mission. We no longer work merely to "get ahead" or "make money." We have learned that true success in business means the creation of jobs, human satisfactions, and social values. This is just as true of those in the distributive and service fields as it is of those engaged in manufacture and agriculture. The "value added" to goods by transportation and merchandising is every bit as great as that contributed by physical processing.

Since I began work in 1906, the number of persons engaged in sales and distribution has risen from three and a half million to seven million -- an increase of exactly 100 per cent. I am confident that it will rise even more sharply in the next decade.

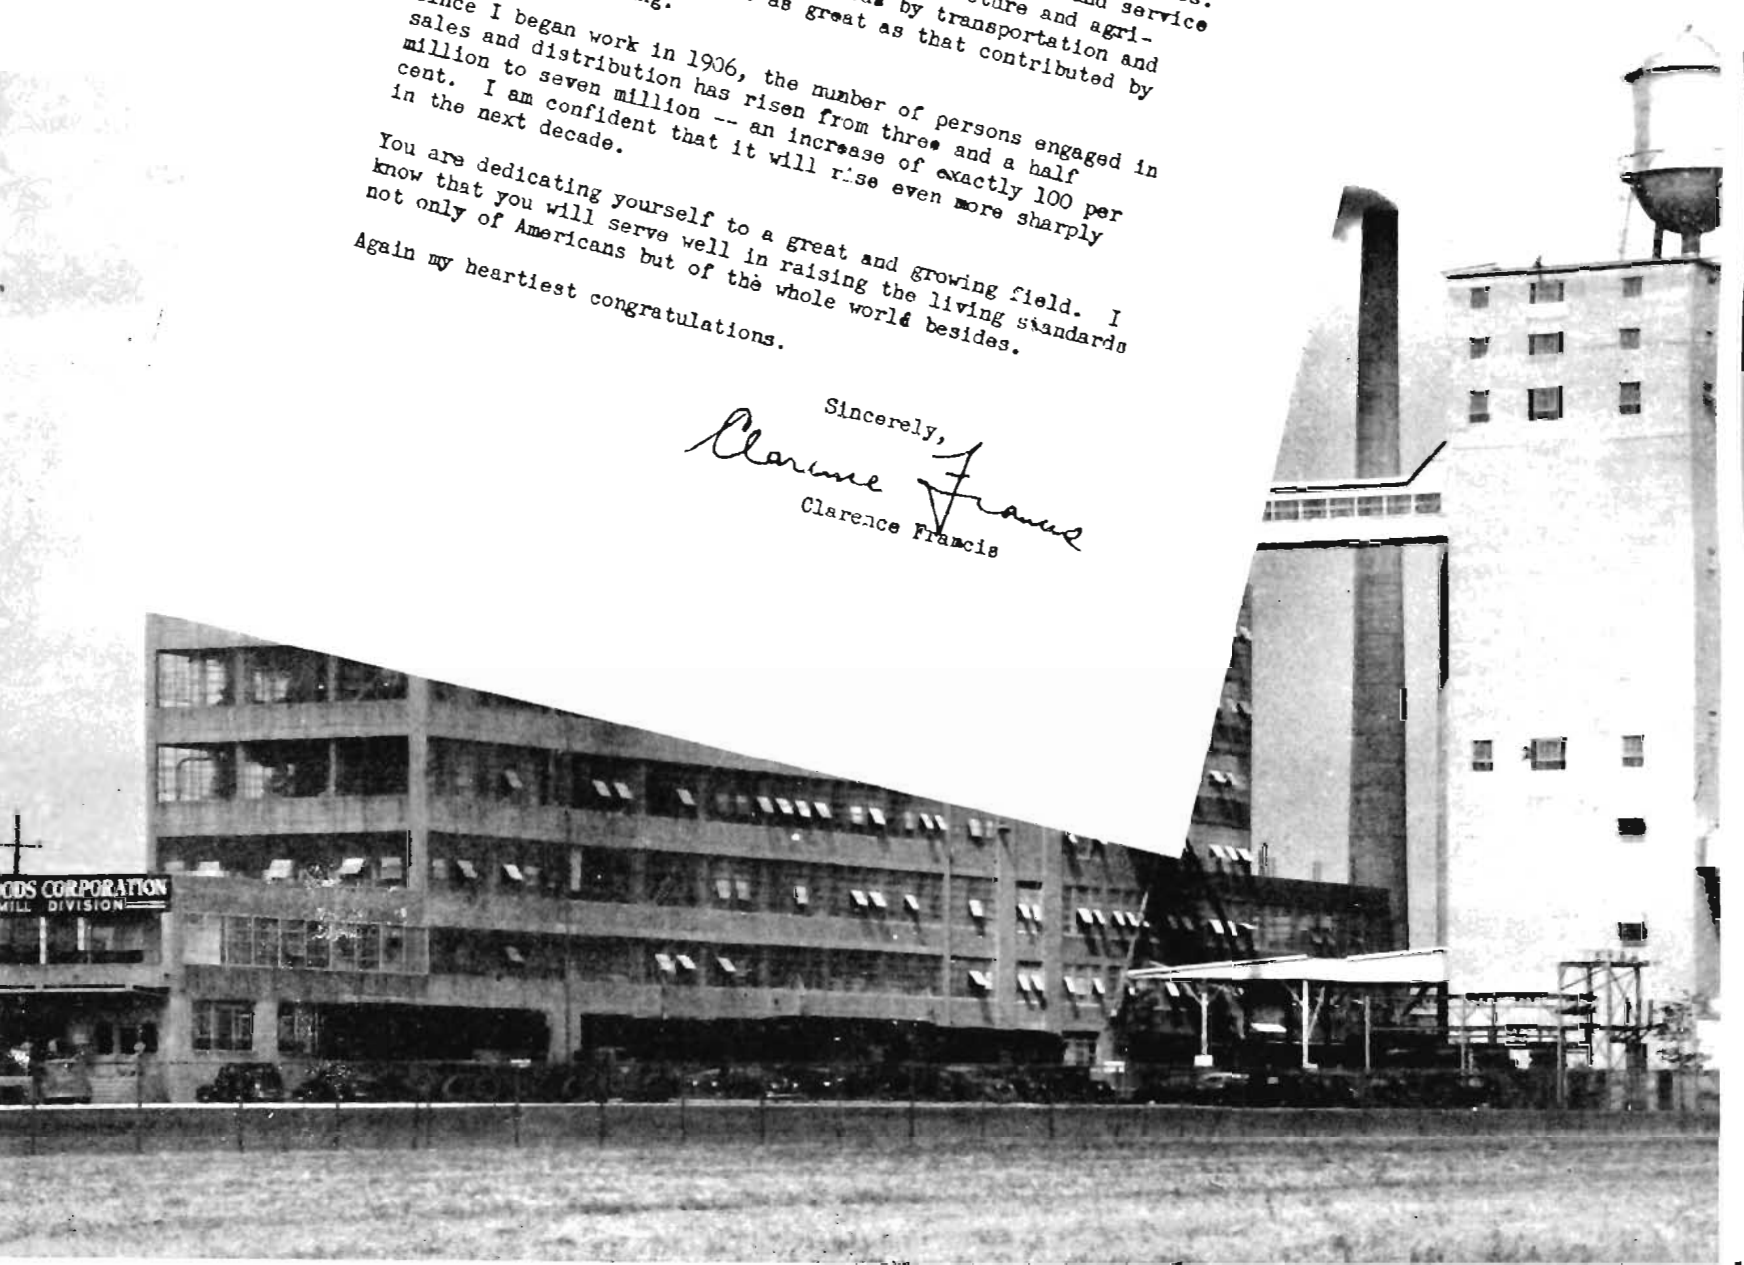

You are dedicating yourself to a great and growing field. I know that you will serve well in raising the living standards not only of Americans but of the whole world besides.

Again my heartiest congratulations.

Sincerely,

Clarence Francis

The Student Council for 1947 is operated on the basis of a broader representation of all students. Each representative is elected by his class and each class has a member on the Council. These men represent the student body administratively and have the responsibility of determining the extra-curricular policy of the Student Body. The Council is the standing bridge of thought between the students and the administration. The Council recognizes the fact that administrative policy is often misunderstood. This can be avoided when satisfactory interpretation of policy is made. Among the more important duties of the Council has been the allocation of the Student Activities Fund. This fund is directed to Athletics, social endeavors, the College Newspaper, and the BABSONIAN.

The students on this year's committee were: Ross V. Davis, chairman; Frank Shiverick, vice chairman; Richard Lindsey, secretary; John O'Neill, treasurer. Members: Thomas Mahoney, Hugh Bradford, Joe Delaney, Lester Gilson, Raymond Hodge, Arthur Rubcor, Douglas Wolf, Thomas Knowlson, Richard Collette, John Gorman, John Westcott and John Lundcen.

ATHLETIC AND PUBLICATIONS COMMITTEE

COUNCIL COMMITTEES

With the plans and arrangements made by the Social Activities Committee under the chairmanship of Dick Lindsey, Babson men have enjoyed a year of many good times and gay social gatherings. The Christmas Formal, held at the Somerset Hotel, with the music of Buddy Rich and his nationally known band, started the students off to a very festive Christmas holiday. A second all-out Winter Formal was held at the Somerset after the winter mid-term exams. This dance proved to be equally as enjoyable as the Christmas Formal. There have also been two on-campus informals staged at Knight Auditorium. The big Spring Formal which was held at the Copley Plaza Hotel climaxed the end of the social season. The Social Committee is to be given a round of applause for the well-planned social program which we all feel necessary in rounding out the life of a business student. The committee consisted of: Richard Lindsey, chairman; members: Raymond Hodge, Joe Delaney, Douglas Wolf, and John Lundeen.

The athletic committee has presented sports of the season on a voluntary, physical development program.

Along with varsity basketball, golf, and tennis teams, there was a hotly contested intramural program of touch football, basketball, and softball. Other sports available were weightlifting, handball, squash, hockey, riding, and the weekly ski trips during the winter to North Conway. The athletic committee consisted of: Hugh Bradford, chairman; members: Joseph Delaney, James Evans, Richard Kime, John Legg, Jr., John O'Neill, William Sharpe, Paul Trout, Herbert Mines, Joseph Harney, Henry Timney, John Coleman, Francis Jacobs, Charles Conley, John Wescott and Blair Rogers.

The Religious and Welfare Committee has two functions on the school campus. The committee presents the Sunday Vesper Services each Sunday evening, at which time students have an opportunity for worship and discussion of current topics. The committee also sponsors welfare drives and provides entertainment for the Convalescent Crippled Children's Home. The committee consisted of: Chairman, Hugh Bradford; members: Robert Hunter and Thomas LaClair.

BABSONIAN BUSINESS BOARD

Throughout the planning and production of this publication, the staff of the 1947 BABSONIAN has endeavored to record both the personalities and events of the school year in a volume which will present a pleasing and complete picture of school life within our institution. It is the hope of the staff of the 1947 BABSONIAN that this yearbook will perpetuate the record of the school year and symbolize each individual's faith in the educational value of Babson Institute.

The publishing of this edition was accomplished only through the cooperation and diligent work of each member of the staff. Equally important was the unflinching help and advice of both the faculty and administration of the institute.

The true complexities of the many problems which confronted the completion of this edition can be understood only by those individuals who undertook the responsibility of collecting and editing the material presented within this annual.

Social Activities

The great variety of social life at Babson provides the student body with the opportunity to get away from textbooks and meet the young ladies from the surrounding schools. The event that is most looked forward to is the formal dance held every term. The Student Council is in charge of arrangements and no expense is spared to see that everyone has a good time.

Several informal dances are held throughout the term in the Knight Auditorium. These on-campus dances provide the Babson boys with their best chance to become acquainted with the girls from colleges in the local area. These informal affairs are sponsored by the Student Council or the Alpha Delta Sigma Fraternity.

The schedule also includes a reception for each new class that enters the Institute, which is held in the Knight Auditorium. Here the new members meet the older students and become acquainted with their future instructors.

The college wife also has her day. A Babson Wives' Club was formed by Mrs. Hinkley, wife of President Hinkley. The bi-monthly meetings are held at Mrs. Hinkley's home and refreshments are served after a few rubbers of bridge.

Campus Life

A DAY AT BABSON

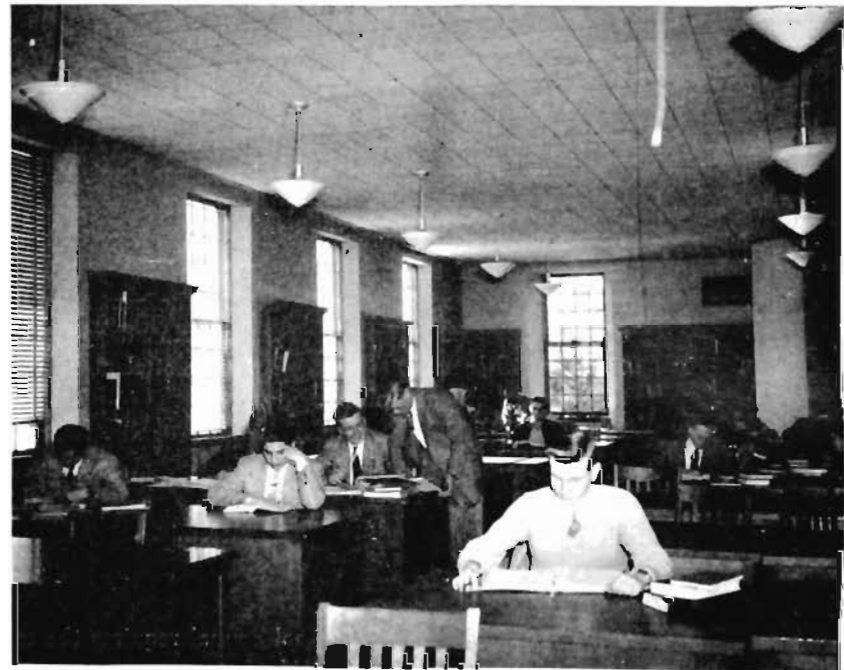

The former G.I. who thought the comradery of the barracks was forever lost has only to look at these informal shots of Babsonites to see that campus life too is steeped in work, fun and friendship. A busy morning that really begins with a hasty breakfast and excited discussion about the day's first class. Was it today we were due for that quizz? The "rugged" morning finally passes and the noon "chow" line seems to have formed as if by magic. A leisure moment is now at hand to exchange the morning's trials and triumphs with the only other of the human species who understands another student.

But we mustn't take too long, that research problem must be completed or we must prepare for that long afternoon class that somehow creeps in and spoils our well laid plans. If we want to let off physical steam, a tennis match or a workout at the gym keeps the mind alert.

At dinner the day reaches its climax. The time has come for an after-dinner smoke and a brief respite from studies. After a favorite news broadcast we return to the book to prepare assignments for the next day's classes. Despite the clacking of the typewriters and the radio down the hall, the work gets done and thus ends the college day.

Student Newspaper

From its reorganization, in the winter term of 1947, after a lapse of war years, the student newspaper has been an organization devoted to the reporting and enumeration of the student activities of both the classroom and the social side of events. The paper consists of six pages, embracing business, sport and gossip sections, which attempt to enlighten the student body on the "goings on" at Babson.

The publication receives most of its support from the student council. The staff of the paper has brought to the attention of the students and faculty alike, the assorted viewpoints regarding school policies and rules. The paper has made it a point to offer honest presentation of all criticism and to grant unbiased credit to whom and where credit is due.

Mr. Employer:

The business man of today needs not only a knowledge of his particular field of activity, but a fundamental basic understanding of the national economy in general. As business becomes more integrated, the required knowledge must become broader.

This objective is accomplished at Babson Institute by a combination of methods. First by study, the individual student must learn the rudiments of business. Secondly, the principles once having been mastered in the classroom are observed in actual practice. Thirdly, the student is trained under conditions that approximate as closely as possible actual working conditions. The combination of these methods gives these young men a mastery of the fundamentals of business management and a broad outlook on the entire field of business activity.

Government regulation and labor and management relations are two of the major problems of the modern business era. Babson trained men cannot solve these problems at the drop of a hat, but they have been trained to understand both sides of such questions and with this knowledge they can be of service to you in your business.

You may be seeking a salesman who may develop into an eventual sales executive; you may be looking for a production man who is a potential superintendent; or a man who comprehends the intricacies of finance.

Today the need is for managerial ability to coordinate the men, materials and money, to produce a product or service. These Babson men need only the opportunity and a little more experience, they have had the training and the "will to win" is there. As you thumb through the pages of this book, observe the characteristics of Babson men. We know you will be impressed with his training.
